Coronavirus and it's impact on Indian Economy:
A road ahead
April 14, 2020

The coronavirus pandemic has created havoc in the economy which has led to the forecasting of upcoming recession. The economic recession of 2020 is going to be more dangerous in the world as compared to 2008. This will have far-reaching consequences on India's economic scenario. The government will have to take tough economic decisions and apply some extra edged efforts to rise again.

Lock-down will cause severe unemployment in rural areas, with migrants returning home may take longer to get employment. Production in the industrial sector has come to a standstill and it may take a long time for these units to run smoothly, this will make a big difference in the tax collection for the government. Employment sectors like tourism, IT, construction etc. will see a decline for at least another 2 years. Similarly, banking and non-banking financial services companies are going to be affected severely. NPAs of banks are going to increase as well as recovery of loans of non-banking financial companies will be very difficult. Some companies may be on the verge of closure.

As eye-watering as this phase of the global economic crisis, the rebound of efforts will be difficult. To return back to pavilion will demand greater efforts by all the stakeholders as well as the government. This webinar aims to facilitate a constructive platform that will foster ideas and remedial measures that can be implied to fight the crises. It will bring together economists, academicians, research scholars, students and delegates to exchange and share ideas that can be helpful to boost prosperity in Indian economy.
